Book Culture agrees to process your books in a timely manner. Bear in mind that we buy libraries on a somewhat frequent basis, and so yours may not be the first in line. Depending on the size of your library, size of the queue, and the time of year it may take between a couple of weeks and over a month for us to process all of your books. You will be appraised of our estimate for how long it will take us to go through your books at the time of pick up/drop off.

Due to the labor and other costs involved in picking up books and boxing them, if we have to pick and box your books we will deduct the cost of these services from our final valuation. For a simple pick up, where you have boxed up the books yourself and have them for us ready at the curb, this fee can be as little as $40. For larger libraries where we have to travel a long distance or box up many books, we will have to consider the labor and material costs involved, and the cost can be as much as $150.

We cannot undo the process of evaluation and moving due to the labor, effort, and research involved: as we look through your books we will be physically pricing them and putting them on our shelves. We will also not keep aside any books that we cannot pay you for or put on our shelves: we will simply donate these books. Because of this stipulation, we insist that your books will become our property when we pick them up and you will be obligated to accept what we offer. We agree to make a fair offer consistent with our estimation of the library's potential in our stores. Our offer will come in a cash value or a value in store credit; the store credit value will be 50% more than the cash value. Keep in mind that our success depends on our integrity. In many cases when we pick up boxes of books the resale value of the books is so low that we offer the seller nothing.

I hereby agree to the stipulations of the Book Culture library buyback agreement:
